

Statement of participation

Guest user

has completed the free course including any mandatory tests for:

Minds and mental phenomena: an introduction

This 20-hour free course examined the philosophical questions surrounding the mind and how beliefs have changed over the centuries.

Issue date: 14 March 2022

www.open.edu/openlearn

This statement does not imply the award of credit points nor the conferment of a University Qualification.
This statement confirms that this free course and all mandatory tests were passed by the learner.

Please go to the course on OpenLearn for full details:

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/history-the-arts/philosophy/minds-and-mental-phenomena-introduction/content-section-0>

COURSE CODE: AA308_1

Minds and mental phenomena: an introduction

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/history-the-arts/philosophy/minds-and-mental-phenomena-introduction/content-section-0>

Course summary

This free course, Minds and mental phenomena: an introduction, examines the philosophical questions surrounding the mind. You will examine how beliefs have changed over the centuries and be able to contrast the views of Descartes with more modern ideas.

Learning outcomes

By completing this course, the learner should be able to:

- discuss basic philosophical questions concerning the mind
- understand problems concerning the mind and mental phenomena and discuss them in a philosophical way.

Completed study

The learner has completed the following:

Section 1

The quick and the dead – the minded and the non-minded

Section 2

Kinds of minds

Section 3

Varieties of mental phenomena

Section 4

The attitudinal and the experiential

Section 5

Dispositions versus occurrences

Section 6

The relations among mental phenomena

Section 7

Conclusion