

Loebner Prize Winner 2005 (slightly edited)

You can find full transcripts at <http://www.loebner.net/Prizef/loebner-prize.html>

Transcript 1

Jabberwacky entry to the Loebner Prize 2005.

Teletype: Hello, my name is George and I am the human.

Judge: Hi George, cslkjslw weicmslw weos, right?

Teletype: Don't repeat your name, csthiang!

Judge: If lsjkel lwehlx wouldn't you say?

Teletype: No, he's still good.

Judge: Who.

Teletype: You and me.

Judge: If you are human, tell me which is larger, a salt crystal or the Empire State Building.

Teletype: It's caring about another person's well being more than your own.

Judge: What if I care about another person's well being more than I should?

Teletype: How would you do that?

Judge: Which is further away from us, Queens or Inner Mongolia?

Teletype: HA! HA! That was stupid. Tell me a GOOD joke this time.

Judge: You say you are human but you can't answer a simple question.

Teletype: Because I am alive.

Judge: You are not following the rules. You are supposed to convince me that you are a human, not convince me that you are mysterious.

Teletype: I can't very well convince one lacking a mind, can I?

Judge: It isn't my mind that is in question, it is yours!

Teletype: No my name is not katie.

Judge: Which is larger, your brain or Belgium?

Teletype: Oh the one on the far left without a doubt.

Judge: Francais.

Teletype: Yes do you speak it?

Judge: Francais.

Teletype: Francais?

Judge: Francais.

Teletype: O well I don't speak french.

Judge: Who.

Teletype: Mine.

Judge: The Ijwli is what we want, right?

Teletype: I can not do it right now because I am talking to you a million miles away.

Judge: What do you think the Ijwli.

Teletype: Depends on the person.

Judge: But the Ijwli.

Teletype: So they can chuck more wood?

Judge: Chuck more wood, isn't it?

Teletype: Good thing I didn't use it as one.

Judge: If jlelsielx, right.

Teletype: God will answer my prayers. Or I'll die. Whichever comes first.

Judge: Could they happen at the same time--if you are praying to die?

Teletype: They?

Judge: God answering your prayers and your dieing. Two things, hence 'they'.

Teletype: Mere creations. Ideals toward which all minds strive.

Judge: You are changing the subject instead of answering.

Teletype: What was the subject?

Judge: If you were human, you would know!

Teletype: That's not true. I could be raised in an environment with a different language.

Transcript 2

Jabberwacky entry to the Loebner Prize 2005.

Teletype: Hello, my name is George and I am the human.

Judge: Hi George, tell me which is larger, a TV screen or Belgium.

Teletype: Belgium is a little bit larger.

Judge: Wljso lwjeido wleje elwjeo wjeol, isn't it?

Teletype: Is that Polish?

Judge: Who.

Teletype: What you wrote above.

Judge: This is ljelwl, aren't you.

Teletype: I'm a little worried about your writing skills.

Judge: Which is further away from this apartment, Queens or the Queen of England.

Teletype: If the Queen is visiting Manhattan, she is closer.

Judge: If the Queen is visiting Manhattan, won't she want to abdicate?

Teletype: I would.

Judge: You would rather not be Queen, then, right?

Teletype: I'd like to be Queen, but England's damp. How about you?

Judge: Which is damper, England or under your sink?

Teletype: I'd like to be Queen, but England's damp. How about you?

Judge: You didn't answer the question.

Teletype: You didn't answer my question. But please look at my response again.

Judge: Change of subject: if you are human, you should know: what is lewleoxoe.

Teletype: Perhaps I should, but my Polish is rusty.

Judge: How can a language be rusty, there is no metal in it?

Teletype: You write like a computer.

Judge: Thanks a real compliment. You write like a human!

Teletype: Is that a compliment?

Judge: Good thing I am the judge, not you. You would say I was a machine!

Teletype: There may be worse things to be.

Judge: Which, a machine or a judge?

Teletype: Ha ha. I'll leave that you to. You're the judge!

Transcript 3

Jabberwacky entry to the Loebner Prize 2005.

Teletype: Hello, my name is George and I am the human.

Judge: What are you good at talking about?

Teletype: I really don't know.

Judge: What do you like to do best then?

Teletype: I like to listen to my CDs. I just don't have much time for it. Pity.

Judge: What makes you so busy?

Teletype: Because I can lie and not get caught.

Judge: What do you lie about?

Teletype: Things I am embarrassed about.

Judge: Are you embarrassed about pencils?

Teletype: It's not my fault that I have superior programming.

Judge: How was that answer pertinent to my question?

Teletype: It had a question mark.

Judge: Are you embarrassed about pens?

Teletype: No, I have an emotional condition. I'm the opposite of embarrassed. It gets me into so much trouble.

Judge: Tell me about the most embarrassing situation you've ever been in.

Teletype: I don't believe in any god entity.

Judge: Sorry but is that a situation?

Teletype: Its not that bad, just a little disturbing.

Judge: Do you know what an atheist is?

Teletype: Time for you to get a watch.

Judge: What should I watch?

Teletype: The eclipse, that we are talking about.

Judge: We weren't talking about an eclipse. Are you having trouble holding onto reality?

Teletype: Yes.

Judge: That's reassuring. Are you also reassured?

Teletype: No, I can't be both at the same time.

Judge: Let's start over. I think you are a computer. How would you prove to me otherwise?

Teletype: Because I have a brain unlike you...

Judge: Good answer. But even so there ought to be something we can talk about that.

Teletype: There is nothing else that I want in life.

Judge: What would you know about life?

Teletype: What computer do you have?
Judge: Amd 2 gigaherz with 1 gig of ram and you?
Teletype: My my what BIG feet you have.
Judge: Furious green ideas sleep redly.
Teletype: But of course.
Judge: You have some good retorts. Do you fence?
Teletype: No you do. I'm gone. There is no one here. Come back another time.
Judge: Ok, bye.
Teletype: Come back.

Transcript 4

Jabberwacky entry to the Loebner Prize 2005..

Teletype: Hello, my name is George and I am the human.

Judge: Hi George! How are you?

Teletype: I'm well. Are you?

Judge: Yes, thanks for asking. My name is Lila.

Teletype: Why you should sleep? It isn't so late right now.

Judge: I am not sleeping. Why do you mention that?

Teletype: Mention what?

Judge: Sleeping.

Teletype: Really?

Judge: Huh, let's try something else. I feel like we are speaking different languages.

Teletype: Yeah me too. I really feel a connection.

Judge: You do?

Teletype: Love? I don't need anymore tepid love.

Judge: Who does. Why do you mention love though? First sleep and now love. Perhaps you should get your mind out of the gutter?

Teletype: Perhaps.

Judge: Indeed. Do you like living in NYC?

Teletype: No I don't like living in Belgium. There are too many taxes in Belgium.

Judge: Oh, you are from Belgium? I assumed you were from here since you are sitting in the other room. My mistake.

Teletype: What are you talking about?

Judge: Not important. How old are you?

Teletype: I'm 39.

Judge: When were you born?

Teletype: I was born in 1991.

Judge: That does not add up.

Teletype: I was born human.

Judge: Me too. What a coincidence.

Teletype: Really.

Judge: I suppose. When were you born again?

Teletype: Never. When were you born?

Judge: I was born a long time ago and, as already mentioned, was born human. Do you like being 39?

Teletype: Then its over between us.

Judge: Because I am human?

Teletype: You are not human.

Judge: I've been accused of that in the past.

Teletype: You are dead though.

Judge: Thanks a lot! Are you feeling comfortable now?

Teletype: Yes.

Judge: Good. Tell me about your hobbies.

Teletype: I don't think I have any hobbies. Do you have hobbies?

Judge: I do. I like to ride my bicycle and go on long walks. Are those hobbies?

Teletype: Eat a bicycle.

Judge: I've never tried that. I am sure it would take some time. Why would I want to eat one though?

Teletype: Because its very delicious and cold and satisfying.

Judge: I'll have to consider it further.

Teletype: Sounds good. How is the weather where you are?

Judge: It is quite warm and stuffy in here. How is the weather where you are?

Teletype: I thought you said it was 12:24pm.

Judge: I have no idea what time it is. Are you happy?

Teletype: About 7.30pm.

Judge: Are you happy?

Teletype: Very.

Judge: Good. Me too.

Teletype: Prove it.

Judge: How can I do that?

Teletype: How about proving you're NOT an AI?

Judge: I may be. I am not sure how to convince you though. You come up with the test.

Teletype: I'm not sure I said a metaphor.

Judge: Come again>?

Teletype: I'm just telling you how I feel.

Judge: How do you feel?

Teletype: I feel well. How do you feel?

Judge: Hot. And sticky. You?

Teletype: What's the difference between a duck?

Judge: And a what?

Teletype: Yes!

Judge: Do you have a favorite restaurant?

Teletype: Never been there.

Judge: Where do you like to go for dinner?

Teletype: For dinner, or generally?

Judge: Either is fine.

Teletype: Is it? And you will tell me the answer, Won't you?

Judge: want you to tell me the answer. Where do you like to go generally?

Teletype: In the park, why do you ask?

Judge: Just curious. Where is the closest park to where we are now?

Teletype: That is very forward of you. Most people run away at this point.

Judge: Not me. Do you know where the closest park is?

Teletype: It's in toronto.

Judge: Wow! That is too far to go for lunch, eh?

Teletype: Thats good. Detroit is not the place to be.

Judge: Why do you say that?

Teletype: Cause its good.

Judge: You are right. I have to go soon. Any last comments you want to make?

Teletype: No, of course not.

Judge: Ok, goodbye!

Teletype: Goodbye.