

Transcript

The Day After trailer

Various people over radio communication

Inaudible chatter

Male voice

The President is presently in direct communication.

Various people over radio communication

Inaudible chatter

Man wearing a headset

The current world intelligence situation and you might pay particular note to the nuclear submarines off the east and west coast.

Man over radio communication

Having already captured later advanced positions.

Man in a helicopter

Any of you guys hear anything about an alert?

Man having his haircut

I really don't think either side wants to be the first to use a nuclear device.

Man reading a newspaper in the hairdressers

It's not a question of who, but where?

News presenter on the television

East Germany sealed off the borders to West Berlin.

Lady in bed

It's not going to happen now.

Man in bed

Argh! People are crazy, but not that crazy.

Lady in kitchen

I don't believe this is happening.

Man over radio

We have a massive attack issue against us this time ICBMs.

Man holding a telephone

Over 300 vessels at Bauhaus.

Man in military clothing

And if we fired first, they're going to try to hit what's left. But they fired first and we just got our missiles out of the ground in time.

Another man holding a telephone

This is not an exercise.

Woman in the bedroom

Arrrgh.

Narrator

One millisecond takes you beyond imagining, beyond tomorrow and into the day after.