Sending Money from Thailand to Myanmar: Practical Options

When you are living, studying, or working abroad and need to send money back home, using official remittance services is safer and more reliable than informal channels. In recent years, a number of digital and bank-linked options have been developed that allow money to be sent from Thailand to Myanmar directly into bank accounts or mobile wallets.

1. TrueMoney International Transfers

TrueMoney is a popular e-payment service in Southeast Asia. It now offers international remittance from Thailand to Myanmar with zero transfer fees for both sending and cashing out.

- Funds can be received at partner banks like MAB Bank, GTB Bank, or KBZ Bank.
- Or through the AYA Pay mobile wallet.

This makes it easier for recipients to access money securely and without additional charges.

2. Wave Money / 2C2P WAVE

Wave Money has teamed up with payment platforms like 2C2P WAVE and DeeMoney to support transfers from Thailand to Myanmar. Using the Wave ecosystem, senders can send money that arrives quickly.

Receiving Options:

- Received in a Wave Wallet
- Withdrawn at Wave agent shops
- Cashed out at Yoma Bank

3. Bank-Linked Transfers

Traditional remittance services like Western Union can also send money from Thailand to Myanmar, including direct bank account transfers depending on the bank used.

- For example, some Thai banks allow you to send money through Western Union’s network directly to a Myanmar bank account.
- Other options include banking partnerships that let you transfer directly into accounts at banks like AYA Bank, where recipients can withdraw local currency at branches or agent locations without extra steps.
