

INSTRUCTOR: "Leadership" is a word that seems to be everywhere at the moment. No matter the problem, sector, or industry, you can't move for people saying that leadership is the solution. Head over to any major online bookseller and type in "leadership." Unsurprisingly, what you'll find is loads of books promising the answer to leadership but not really offering much of a sense of what they mean, beyond the obvious just doing well. But worse than this, they tend to attribute success to lone individuals.

In this course, we will be discussing leadership as something that comes alive through practise. So whether you're a volunteer, a trustee, a manager, a chief executive, or even someone who simply works a lot with volunteer organisations, this course was designed with you in mind, to build a strong collaborative leadership between interesting groups and people.
